

Ellie Krause

A Young Member's Winning Presentation

Ellie Krause stood with confidence and poise when asking the crowd, “Did you turn on the lights this morning? If you did, and live in the country, your electricity probably came from Oakdale Electric Cooperative.” On May 6, Ellie, a fourth-grade student from Wyeville Elementary School, presented at the Regional Heritage Fair event. Her topic of choice? Oakdale Electric Cooperative!

The Heritage Fair project is a program offered to fourth-grade students providing the opportunity to research a historical person, place, thing, or event from Wisconsin that they hold an interest in. The guidelines include creating a display, writing a speech, and presenting the topic to a live panel of judges from local businesses. Some youth even opt to get into character by dressing up and using props. This program not only teaches youth about Wisconsin’s history, but it also enables students to learn valuable public speaking skills. For the first round of competition, students compete against their own classmates, and only one winner from each school is able to move on on to the Regional Heritage Fair. However, at this event all youth are recognized and deemed winners.

Over 75 students traveled from Viroqua, Hillsboro, Cashton, Sparta, Westby, and Norwalk/Ontario/Wilton to St. Matthew Church in Warrens to listen and learn from their peers. Ellie, along with her peers, delivered her speech twice to two different groups, with a milk and cookie break in between. In addition, this special day included an awards ceremony and guest speaker, Jarrod Roll from the Monroe County Historical Society.

This isn’t the first time a member of Ellie’s family received top honors for a Heritage Fair project. Three years ago, Clara, Ellie’s older sister, was also selected as Wyeville Elementary School’s representative. With Clara being a great role model, Ellie was very dedicated, practicing daily immediately following school for an hour. Her efforts were noticeable as she spoke without any notecards or nerves, which is a difficult feat for many adults!

Ellie has a passion for this topic because she was eager to learn more about the company that has employed her grandfather (or “Bumpa,” as Ellie refers to him), Jim Hayward, for 44 years. Ellie confidently spoke about the origins and history of Oakdale Electric Cooperative, explained the meaning of the cooperative difference, as well as the changes and growth over the years. She highlighted the new headquarters building built in 2004 and excitedly shared the increase in membership from 700 to currently 17,000. When asked what she found most interesting during her research, Ellie replied that she learned Oakdale Electric Cooperative’s first members, Mr. and Mrs. William Mortenson, used to live near her family’s home.

Besides her Bumpa, Ellie sought out other retirees for information, pictures, and items for display. These included books, newsletters, safety glasses, gloves, hard hat, mini bucket truck, and even a picture of Bumpa their journey to adulthood. We provide secondary educational scholarships, sponsor attendees to Youth Leadership Congress, and support our local high schools. If Ellie is any indication of what our future generation holds, it is as bright as her pink Oakdale Electric Cooperative hat!—Deana Protz, PR & Communications, Oakdale Electric Cooperative ■ climbing a pole! Her poster contained a collection of photographs of Oakdale Electric Cooperative’s history over the past 75 years. And keeping in part with her theme, Ellie proudly sported a bright pink OEC hat that complimented her contagious smile and enthusiasm.

Ellie rounded off her speech with a very direct statement: “People’s lives wouldn’t be the same if it weren’t for Oakdale Electric Cooperative!” We couldn’t agree more!
